By Jennifer Blomberg

Head, Collections Management, Division of Archives and Records
North Carolina Department of Natural and Cultural Resources

Jennifer will discuss the conservation, environment, housing and storage of antique documents. Most of us have documents and photos that have been handed down in the family for generations. We want these documents to survive for our future generations. This presentation is very important for us to meet that goal. She will also discuss finding a conservator and will bring housing samples to show. If you want to bring things to ask her questions about, she is happy to look at them and give advice.

Jennifer is the Head of the Collections Management Branch for the State Archives of North Carolina. She oversees the preservation programming for the Archives including disaster response, environmental monitoring, collection assessment, and policies regarding care, handling, and the storage of records. She received her Masters of Information and Library Science (MILS) with a specialization in Archives, Records Management, and Preservation from the University of Pittsburgh. Previous to working at the State Archives of North Carolina, she worked at various cultural institutions including Duke University Libraries, University of Delaware, and the Conservation Center for Art and Historic Artifacts in Philadelphia.
